A pleasing feature of the evening was the cordial reception given the members of the Ladiea' Auxiliary by the fair violiniat. The ladies had arranged to meet Miss MacCarthy at the Auditorium, and it was some time after the concert before she allowed them to depart.

Ever since the performance the members of the Hibernians who took a leading part in making the entertainment a success have been complimented. It may be said that those who took a leading part were closely followed by the rank and file, and every member of the order entertainment.

LABOR TROUBLES.

This is the time of the year when the mechanic seeks employment and better wages if possible. This has been a long, hard winter and has been the cause of hardship to many workingmen. The members of the trades unions in Louisville are conservative men. There are fewer strikes in Louisville every spring than in any other large city in the country. There would be no strikes at all if the employer and employe would get together aud agree to do justice to each other. The golden rule ought to seitle labor disputes. There are some employers who are disposed to treat their men fairly, and as a consequence they never have any trouble, but on the other hand there is the employer who is always seeking to keep down wages and to grind the life out of his employes. There are unreasonable men in the unions, too.

During the past week there has been a few strikes in Louisville, but they have been greatly overestimated in importance by the daily press. This year the employers have an association to look after their interests and have walking delegates like the labor organizations. This is something new for that was greatly enjoyed, and they by the Illness of Michael Finegan, Ninth Louisville. So far the Employers' Association does not seem to have accomplished much good toward settling disputes, but rather its policy seems to have had the reverse effect. However, no serious strikes may be looked for in Louisville, as the mechanics are only asking for the past five years, reached New vork on they were the reciplenta of much social wages which are paid to the trades in other cities of this size.

TRYING TO BREAK UNIONS.

It seems to be the set policy of the Employers' Association in Louisville to try to enforce the Parry system in this city—that is, to have open shops and to break up the union labor organizations. This policy seems to be an unwise one, and may result in great harm to proprietors as well as workingmen. Should the ''open shop' scheme win this year, which is improbable, the fight would not be have to make the same fight next year. Until the Employers' Association was organized the workngmen in Louisville got along very the men worked for smaller wages than were paid elsewhere. There were no strikes in April, 1903, but this year the Employers' Associaseveral that were unnecessary. The pending troubles could have the Employers' Association. The proprietors of the various establishments siding with the Employers' Association may find that is not unions in Louisville.
